

FEDERAL OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH

Online Medical Evaluations for Respirator Use

If any of your employees are required to use a respirator at your federal facility, Federal Occupational Health's (FOH's) Online Medical Evaluation System can help establish employee clearance levels to meet OSHA mandates. This low-cost, easy-to-use, web-based system is not only convenient, but can deliver significant cost savings to your agency.

What are the benefits?

- A customized approach to meet the needs of your agency
- A national network of experienced and certified Environmental Health trainers and specialists

“One of the biggest advantages of FOH is eliminating the need for multiple contracts all over the country. FOH provides services to our 50+ offices nationally. They coordinate on-site visits and perform direct consultations with our employees, who appreciate the one-on-one contact.”

The medical evaluation:

- Is easy for the employee to use
- Can be completed relatively quickly (usually in 15 to 20 minutes)
- Is available on any computer with Internet access
- Fits your employees' schedules (available 24/7)
- Applies to the respirator types and brands used at your facility
- Is specific to your particular work conditions

Reports provide the information you need by informing you with immediate results:

- Tracking the employee's progress
- Notifying you when the employee receives clearance
- Notifying you when the employee needs to be recertified

Board-certified occupational medicine physicians complete the reviews and, when necessary, make recommendations for additional medical evaluation.
